English Support Programmes

Our EAL programmes are designed to support all children with English as an Additional Language (EAL). Our programmes combine in-class support with some small-group withdrawal support. Our beginner-level EAL programmes are designed to support children who are new to English. Children are taught foundation-level English and are supported by Learning Support Assistants in core mainstream subjects. We also provide EAL programmes for children who have some English but are working below the expected level for their age group. These programmes give children the tools and confidence they need to transition into the mainstream and access curriculum content independently.

High School EAL Programme:

Level 1: This is designed for intermediate English language learners with high conversational spoken English levels and mostly accurate written English. These students will receive one session a week of Literacy Support lessons.

Level 2: This is for students who have basic spoken English but for whom reading and writing are at beginner levels. These students will receive 4 sessions a week of Literacy Support lessons.

Level 3: This is for students who are absolute beginners at the very start of their English acquisition journey. These students will receive 4 sessions a week of Literacy Support lessons and will be withdrawn from the Humanities (History and Geography in years 8 and 9) to receive guided instruction by one of the Literacy Support teams in those subjects. Finally, in-class support is provided for English, Maths and Science.

Learning Support

Learning support for students is delivered in class, in small groups or one to one withdrawal depending on the nature of the activity and the specific needs of the student. Our focus is not wholly academic as we also endeavour to foster students' social skills and self-esteem. This support is further extended by the Learning Support Assistant professional development programme.

Some children have needs like Autism and/ or ADHD, which means that they would find it difficult to work on their own in a mainstream classroom. At St Andrews, we have developed a programme where children can have individual support from a Learning Support Assistant so that they can be educated in a mainstream class environment with their peers. The Learning Support Assistants have been trained by our specialist Learning Support teachers and coordinators so that they can plan and deliver individual support programmes to children within the mainstream classroom. This support could be full-time or a percentage of mainstream teaching time.
